

From: Sean Major
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/19/02 3:09pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern:

For a punishment for Microsoft's anti-competitive behavior in the computer market place I would like to see Microsoft provide funding to schools which are the poorest of the poor in the United States of America.

This $1billion minimum amount would go to funding any areas of the school, which each individual school or school board sees fit. That would mean that a school could use the money to buy new textbooks, new musical instruments, stationary supplies, athletic equipment or other requirements.

In terms of using the money for buying new computers or other technology that would also be fine, but Microsoft would not be allowed to insist that schools buy Microsoft products with their allotment. Schools would be allowed to buy computers from any source, even a competitor such as Apple Computer, Inc., which has a strong presence in the educational industry.

Microsoft has the cash reserves to implement the $1billion minimum and any proposals below this level should be rejected.

Sincerely,
Sean Major

sean_major@hotmail.com